Adolescent & counseling

It is hoped that through this project, we can build a space platform for young people to solve problems, talk about problems, and express themselves. At the same time.

It helps adolescents to establish a sense of psychological identity independently, confide in each other's troubles, and help each other solve problems. We also hope to attract more audiences to pay attention to the mental health problems of teenagers.

Project background

Problems to be solved:

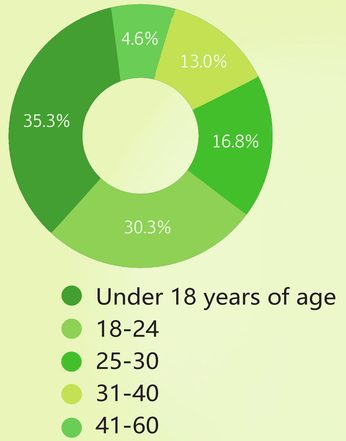

According to the survey, we find that modern teenagers will encounter some psychological problems in their daily life.

Specific description of psychological problems:

Depression risk: About 14.8% of adolescents have varying degrees of depression risk, of which 4% are at risk of major depression and 10.8% are at risk of mild depression. This rate is higher than among adults, and girls have higher depression scores than boys.

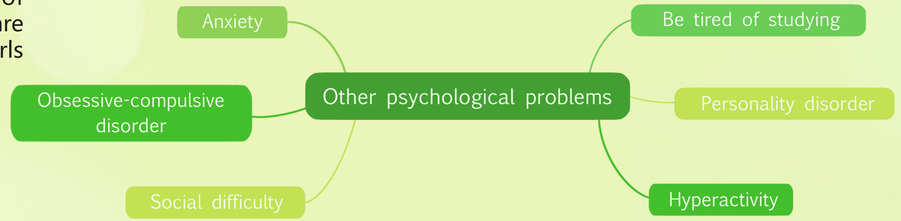

In addition, adolescents who are third or younger in families with many children, as well as those with strained family relationships and parents who do not get along, are more likely to have psychological problems.

The treatment of psychological disorders mainly relies on methods such as medication, psychotherapy, and physical therapy. Medication therapy regulates the patient's emotions and mental state by taking medication.

Other psychological issues:

In addition to depression, adolescents may also face a variety of mental health issues such as anxiety, obsessive-compulsive disorder, and social difficulties. For example, long-term study pressure and monotonous activities may lead to psychological fatigue and decreased concentration among teenagers. Resistance and boredom to study and fear of exams

Are also common phenomena. According to these problems, we set up an adolescent psychological counseling website to help these teenagers vent their emotions, solve the unpleasant life, avoid the tendency of depression, and give them comfort and companionship.

Through communication and sharing with professional psychological counselors, patients can receive emotional support and understanding. The main goal of psychological counseling is to help patients recognize the essence of their psychological problems, a find methods and strategies to resolve problems.

Analysis and inverstigation

Idea inspiration:

According to the recent current affairs news, Handan junior high school student murder case, we plan to develop a website, about the effective solution of adolescent psychological problems, the use of the website to help teenagers relieve pressure, talk about troubles, solve problems. In the website design, we will take ip characters as the main clue to guide students with psychological problems to talk out their problems, the benefit is to help children independently establish a psychological identity, talk to each other about trouble problems, help each other solve, but also effectively avoid dangerous events similar to "Handan junior high school students killed".

Design ideas:

1.Based on website and APP page design, design and display a variety of different content of the web page, as well as web peripheral products, promotional posters.

2.Based on website and APP page design, design and display a variety of different content of the web page, as well as web peripheral products, promotional posters.

Analysis and inverstigation

Specific design ideas:

1.Content: First complete the visual design of the main page of the website, then design an ip character to help guide problem solving, design a chat interface to talk to each other about problems, design a tree hole page to help communicate through the message box.

2.Color application: ip characters choose pink and white, pages and tree holes choose green.

3.Element selection: Lamb image ip, web layout.

4.Functional design of web pages and apps:
The effect of tree hole:
The individual confides anonymously, publishes anonymously, and publishes the content publicly
You can choose the content you are interested in to reply
The role of consulting in solving problems:
One-on-one conversations with dedicated psychologists. Help teenagers solve psychological problems.

6.Competitor strategy:

Given our knowledge of our competitors at this stage, our strategy is as follows:

（1）When entering the website, there will be an interesting psychological assessment, so that users can better discover their own psychological problems and take corresponding help and treatment.

（2）There will be professional psychological experts to guide and help teenagers solve psychological problems.

（3）You can interact and chat with your peers online to better solve your own problems and get out of the shadows.

（4）Set up a tree hole, you can talk about your problems and vent your unhappy emotions.

7.Web design:

Web design: The page design is concise and clear, highlighting the features and highlights of the project, while focusing on the user experience, ensuring that the page loads quickly and the content is easy to navigate and understand. Through the design of the promotional page, it can better help teenagers solve psychological problems and enhance the visibility and influence of the website.

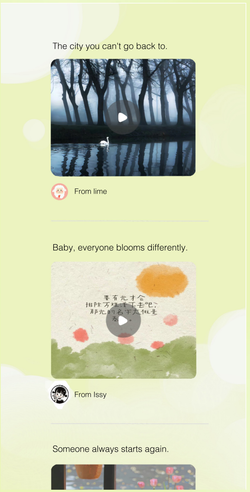

Design process and development

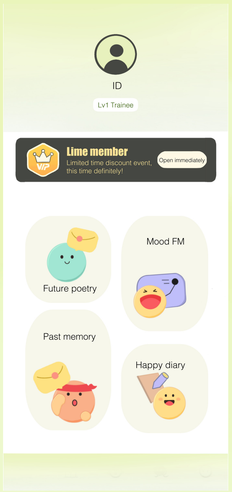

Specific steps:

(1) We first search for reference inspiration through research. We search for excellent cases from different websites, draw on their layout and combine our own innovation to design our own page sketches.
(2) After final screening, it was decided that the style of the APP webpage design is fresh, natural, and simple. As the audience is teenagers, the colors that teenagers like were used for design, which is more convenient for teenagers to relax, enjoy themselves, and have the courage to express themselves.
(3)Main page design, setting the overall tone.
(4)Design visual illustrations and icons for each page.
(5) Use ID for layout and comprehensive design, and finally make adjustments.
